Reproduction

This is one of our latest reproductions. A customer in Devon bought the lamp in an antiques market in Amsterdam and was devastated when it got broken during a house move. We were approached to make a replica shade. From looking at the shade we could see that the original was made using a large mould and to manufacture a new mould and make a new shade would cost tens of thousands of pounds. So instead we offered the option of hand blowing a plain one of the same size and shape, scallop the edge, drill a central hole and sandblast to replicate the moulded look it originally had. The picture shows some of the original broken parts and the reproduction shade.

Gothic Revival Bowl light

These large Gothic revival bowl lights were recently manufactured for a private bank in London, they have a cut and frosted dish and either a dark bronze or verdigris finish. They have 8 internal E14 lamps.
